Call for Participants!
Ki Culture Pilot program for the European Theatre Convention

Ki Futures empowers cultural professionals to be Champions for sustainability in their jobs and theatres. A global coaching and training network, the program helps shape and guide your sustainability journey - whether you are at the beginning or you have been working with sustainability for years. Ki Futures makes sustainability achievable and unites the cultural sector globally to become leaders for a sustainable future.

What is Ki Futures?

The Ki Futures program is everything a cultural professional needs to become a sustainability Champion. Ki Futures offers training, coaching, networking, peer-to-peer workshops, and a resource hub to help Champions navigate sustainability and effectively take action. Champions work locally with Coaches and globally with other participants to share best practices and find real solutions.

The Pilot

Ki Futures is currently being piloted for the visual arts sector by 30 museums, artists, galleries, museum associations, artist residencies, and shipping and transportation companies on 5 continents. Starting in January, 10-15 members of the European Theater Convention are invited to participate in an exclusive 3-month pilot for the theatre sector. Thierry Leonardi, sustainability consultant for the performing arts, will coach the ETC Champions who will work together and with Ki Champions globally to support the ETC Sustainable Action Code

Register

For more information about Ki Futures see www.kiculture.org/ki-futures/ or contact Ki Culture at kifutures@kiculture.org.

To register, contact Caitlin Southwick at caitlin.southwick@kiculture.org or Heidi Wiley at hwiley@europeantheatre.eu.